

TOM LESH.

A BRIEF HISTORY

I started in Lighting in 1983 working for a theatre lighting company on the South Coast of England. In 1984 I was employed by Entec Sound and Light where I learnt the basic principles of lighting and touring. After the first year with Entec I became the in-house designer for the Marquee Club, in Wardour Street, which then led me to start designing my own shows.

The opportunity then arose for me to become a freelance lighting designer and I became involved with Chameleon Lighting, working closely with, and being mentored by Pete Barnes.

In 1992 Chameleon Lighting came to an end and it was at this point that the first intelligent light systems were being introduced. I then took the opportunity to work with Neg Earth Lights learning the ins and outs of DMX desks and lights, by crewing and programming for other designers, whilst still designing some shows and tours of my own.

After six years at Neg Earth Lights, working on many large scale events, concerts, tours and festival productions, it was time to return to design. With the knowledge gained from working on such productions and having had the use of some of the best and most sophisticated equipment available I was ready to bring it all together and put it to good use.

With this in mind, Lushlounge Design was formed in 2000 and now supplies some of the most intelligent and creative show designs for today's industry.

Each design is specifically tailored to meet the needs of the client. This can involve all elements of the production, including lighting, set and visual hardware design.

Recent clients benefitting from full production design include:

Muse

The Chemical Brothers

The Feeling

Texas

Lily Allen

Will Young

A list of some of Lushlounge's clients follows, however if you wish to see a more comprehensive list of artists, please go to my website.
